“ So sorry for your loss, especially the circumstances in which he left. I know your pain and it is very hard. Nothing will ever take the pain away, but in time the hurt gets stretched out through the days, weeks and months. It still hurts but living with it for a while makes it numb...love you all, if we can do anything let us know...

“ He was one of my son's friend. He spent alot of time with our family, growing up. He was a really good kid with a big heart. I was leaving for work one morning last summer (about 4 am) and this came pulled into my driveway. I freaked out a little bit because no one comes to my house, let alone at 4 am. All I could see was this tall man walking towards me in the dark. I went to get into my truck as fast as I could and my heart began to race. Right before i got into my truck, I heard a chuckle. It was then I realized it was Ray. We talked for a good 20 minutes. I hadn't seen him for a while, well because, life happens. We get jobs, raise kids and whatever else life throws at us. It's always nice to catch up on the past, but sometimes, the past catches up with you.
